Dear Ritesh

I hope this mail finds you in pink health (physically, mentally, & spiritually). I know this month has been particularly rough for you, of course there are a lot of good news for you as well.

So, first let me start with the things that are bothering you & not just mentally, but physically as well. One thing that you ~~hadn't~~ hadn't anticipated at all!

You had a bad accident (okay not so bad; but bad enough to slow you down & keep you from many of the daily chores like morning physical activity, evening stretching or even walking has been limited). And this happened when you finally felt like you had settled down in India, getting a move on from USA life & turning a new leaf as an independent career. You were also about to finally figure out your ideal daily routine. But yeah as they say - never get too comfortable about or around anything, especially around Indian traffic. And yeah incorporating mindfulness during driving is a bad idea - it's almost fatal! You need to be alert all the time & cannot rest until you have reached your destination. And you need to do it day in & day out without complaining.

Now let's move on to the second major ~~thing~~ thing in your life right now - & no it's not research, it's not even your independent career - it's marriage. You had been so hell-bent on marrying Priya (just wanted to get done with this no?) that you were willing to ignore all the red flags, giving in to all her conditions. But at the same time, she ^{was} also a harbinger of what it takes to be a partner (hate to break it to you, it's not easy) & you cannot just
